What does it mean to be a member of Woodcraft Folk?

You've joined a unique movement united by the vision of a fairer, more sustainable world. The time and money you contribute to Woodcraft Folk enable us to educate new generations of children and young people, in exciting and progressive ways, to develop a worldview and take action for social change. Our belief in co-operation and equality means we all work together as equals to shape the organisation and to ensure even our youngest members can take part in Woodcraft Folk democracy, as well as developing their participation in wider society.

You're now part of a large, friendly community who collaborate on campaigns, projects, inspiring summer camps and of course grassroots activities for young people. The most immediate way to be involved is through your local Woodcraft Folk group but if there isn't one currently near to you, or you're more interested in national activities, the best way to stay in touch is through the website, the monthly e-newsletter and our termly members newspaper The Courier; through these you'll be engaged in debates, invited to events and kept informed of the latest resources and support. Your membership card/certificate/number also entitles you to YHA discounts, amongst other things.

You've just signed up to the Woodcraft Folk Aims and Principles:

Woodcraft Folk was started by a young person.

In 1925, 19 year-old Leslie Paul broke away from an existing youth organisation and, with others in south London, established the first Woodcraft Folk groups. They became the first nationwide youth organisation to accept both boys and girls, and members of any religion or none. Since then Woodcraft Folk has been the UK's only national, co-operative youth movement.

Children and young people continue to develop the skills and confidence to explore their surroundings and take a lead in running their group, camp or project, and we're committed to supporting them to do this. Teenage members often help out with a younger group, and District Fellows, Woodcraft Folk's 16 – 20 year old age group, run their own events, projects and campaigns, which you can read about on their website www.spanthatworld.com. They've taken action on human trafficking, nuclear energy, and relations between Israel and Palestine, to name just a few issues. One of their current initiatives is The Share, which aims to give DFs training in low-carbon skills and ultimately build a sustainable national DF Centre.

Start your own Woodcraft Folk group—and help make Woodcraft Folk bigger and stronger

We would love to help more communities develop their own Woodcraft Folk groups. It's a great way to meet new people, make connections in your area and engage children and young people in outdoor adventures and issues like human rights and the environment.

There are lots of different ways of running a Woodcraft Folk group, including parent co-operatives, leader-led groups and self-organising groups of young people. Whichever method you'd like to try, we can put you in touch with any other volunteers in your area and supply you with ideas and resources to get your group going.

Get support, training and resources

We've developed hundreds of activity plans, videos, guides and policies to help volunteers run groups and events within Woodcraft Folk. Most are at www.woodcraft.org.uk/resources.

We run as much training as we can for both adult leaders and young people who want to develop their skills, and promote our training events on www.woodcraft.org.uk/calendar.

As you get more involved in Woodcraft Folk, you might want the support of a mentor or a New Group Buddy—just ask!

Buy Woodcraft goodies from Folk Supply

Woodcraft Folk branded equipment, clothing and badges are all gathered together in our shop, Folk Supply, which you can access on the website or via the Woodcraft Folk office. An order form is online.

A Woodcraft Folk camp isn't complete without Woodie Hoodies, Woodcraft song books and Woodcraft torches! New hoodies and t-shirts are usually produced to commemorate our best-loved events, projects and international camps.

Join projects and campaigns

Woodcraft members have been present in huge numbers at peaceful protests such as the demonstrations against the Iraq war in 2003, and marches against education cuts in 2010. There are lots of campaigns and projects around Woodcraft Folk, who would love to hear from you if you're passionate about the issue they're tackling or have skills to share with them. We also produce educational materials and campaign materials you find on the website.

International work

Woodcraft Folk is a member of the International Falcon Movement (IFM), which links us to many other youth groups around the world and provides Woodcraft members with amazing opportunities to travel, volunteer overseas, participate in exchanges and broaden their experience of the world. On our website you'll find stories from young people who've taken up these opportunities – and chances to apply for them yourself.

Explore our Outdoor Centres and Campsites

Groups of young people from inside and outside Woodcraft Folk absolutely love staying at our centres and campsites, where they can explore the natural world, take on new outdoor challenges and co-operate to cook their own meals and look after their environment. Some are run by dedicated staff, others by local volunteers, and all are in beautiful rural areas.
