The process now the applicant has gone to appeal due to non-determination is that the Development Control Committee at the District Council at their next meeting will receive a report from the Officers and make a decision as if they were going to determine the application. After this the matter would then go the Planning Inspectorate who would hold a public enquiry and the application would be determined. Cllrs. West and Clough were questioned by members of the public on the determining criteria set, about how a non-determination on such an application had been allowed to happen, the planning process, national planning policy on such applications as well as local examples of win turbine applications that have gone to appeal.
