Dear People,

On Monday last I was with four families to arrange funerals. Such sadness. I went to a school governors' meeting, carrying the sadness but fully attentive to all that happened at the meeting. Three funerals last week, one this week, three more next week and already one more the following week. Please pray with and for the families in their grief.

At the same time I have been trying to visit our housebound and sick for Holy Communion. I take Holy Communion to twenty-four people regularly (Sister Mary and the Ministers also have their regular calls), besides those who are at present sick but hope to return to church soon. Please pray for all our sick and housebound.

Our First Communion programme recommences this week. Please pray for our young ones and their families. I wish they were all here every Sunday at mass. How can I help and persuade them? How will the children grow in appreciation of Holy Communion if they rarely come to mass? We pray.

About Confirmation, what do you think? I asked the youngsters to write a personal letter, explaining why they want to be confirmed. Too often, young people are pushed into Confirmation by parents and/or grandparents and have no personal interest. The youngsters have written good letters. Please pray for them.

God bless our parish, old and young. Fr. John

Postbag

Dear Fr John,

You were concerned last week for the former bishops being ordained Catholic priests. Your concern seemed to be that they had to publicly admit they had not been truly ordained priests in the Church of England, and that priests remaining in the C of E were being told implicitly that their ordinations are not valid and they do not share the full sacramental life of Christ.

I understand these hurts, and know how insulting Christian Churches and people have been towards each other over the centuries. Few people in the Church of England can feel pleased at what is happening. How would we feel if the news were of three Catholic bishops and many priests and people going over to the Church of England?

You did not mention women and their hurts. These three former bishops accepted the ordination of women but they refused to accept a woman's authority as bishop. Are they still allowed to agree with the ordination of women, as they used to? Is it simply women in authority they object to? Women in the Catholic Church who hope that one day Rome will allow the question to be discussed (you reminded us of the Papal Commission in 1974!) feel the insult for the women in the Church of England. You did not mention women and their place in the Church. But, then, you are only a man.

Sincerely, Fr John (based on comments!)

Dear People of the Parish,

The latest edition of Word for Today is at the back of church. It is good, as always. Only 50p. Many thanks for your support. Clare.
