Welcome to the September Flyer

I am happy to say that we are able to continue delivering black and white paper copies of the Flyer to all residents of Farringdon. This is possible due to the much appreciated assistance of Mantracourt Electronics Ltd of The Drive, Farringdon who are producing the copies.

We will continue to publish on the Village Facebook page and the Parish Website in colour.

Contributions to the Flyer would be appreciated by the 22nd of the Month please.

This month's cover picture is of one of the the Birth Flowers for September, the Aster or Michaelmas Daisy.

Asters play an essential role in traditional medicine. Ancient people used to smoke and burn these flowers to ward off any negative energy in an area. Moreover, native tribes use these flowers as a treatment against muscle pain, headaches, colds, and flue.

The name aster originated from a Greek word that means "star," referring to the star-shaped flowers of the plant. The relevance also has something to do with popular Greek mythology about the Greek Titan goddess of falling stars and nighttime divinations, Asteria. According to a legend, the aster flower came from Asteria's tears as she began to cry when the stars in the dark sky were too few.

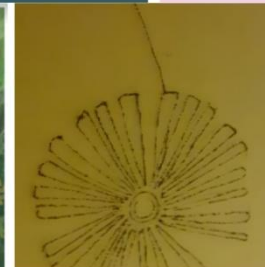

Morning Glory is the other birth flower for September and the 11th wedding anniversary flower. Interestingly, this flower blooms in the morning and dies within the day hence the name "Morning Glory."

In the language of flowers, morning glory blooms represent unrequited love because of their short lifespan. They also symbolize affection, mortality, mourning, and resurrection.

Vicar's article

I am writing this article the day after the news broke about the knife attack on Salman Rushdie; which was truly shocking, but perhaps not totally unexpected. When I discussed this with my mother I talked about the difference between radical extremists who claim to be Islamic, as opposed to Jewish or Christian ones. All extremists can be scary – I loathe what is said by some American fundamentalist so-called Christians and I believe a Scandinavian knife- attacker claimed to have had a Christian rationale for what he did. But, generally, there is no support for extreme violence by Christian fundamentalists. Whereas, of course, there appears to be so for Islamic attacks, from both pressure groups, political groups and even states, such as Iran.

I am no Islamic scholar, nor one of Judaism, but I am aware of the joint heritage the so-called Abrahamic faiths have. In all three sacred texts, there is the call by God to go and destroy, even totally destroy, in the Hebrew Scriptures/Old Testament, a particular group of enemies. Many Christians spend a lot of time struggling with these texts, but most now see – even fundamentalist Christians – that these are not examples for how to behave today. These doesn't mean that I haven't argued, many times, about how a Christian can combine "an eye for an eye" and "turn thou the other cheek".

Before I get too political, I'll conclude this article with one practical example I have discussed before with my mother – one of my favourite films, which may surprise you, "The life of Brian".

My family had to drive 15 miles to see it in Dorchester, rather than 5 miles to Yeovil, because Yeovil town council, in its infinite wisdom, had chosen to ban it. Whilst some Christians clearly found it offensive, I gather there is a scene in it, involving a religious leader, which could be offensive to Jews (no offence was intended this way, I believe, in the film-making).

I think it is good for Christianity not to take itself too seriously, to poke fun at some of its beliefs, and that it is big enough to accept some mud, or worse, being slung at it. Perhaps at another time I'll explain why the song "Always look on the bright side of life", though shocking, isn't offensive to me.

Instead I'll tell you my favourite scene, reflecting my schooling, perhaps lost on people younger than I am – and that is when John Cleese, a centurion pretending to be a schoolmaster, takes Brian to task (and twists his ear!) not for writing graffiti, but his incorrect Latin. Brian writes, wrongly, 'Romanes eunt domus', which is corrected to 'Romani ite domum' – and Brian has to write it out a hundred times all over the nearby buildings. If you need a grammatical explanation – watch the film again!

One reporter said about the Rushdie affair that nowadays no serious publisher would consider publishing a novel like "Satanic Verses", which I have not read, though I have tried to.

The sad thing is, that I don't believe a film like "The life of Brian" would be made now either. What an interesting and sad comment on the modern secular/religious debate.

Let's pray for Salman's recovery, and for greater tolerance, both in and out of religion. Amen.
